Singing the Transfiguration

In the dawn's soft glow
A melody awakens
Transforming stillness to song
As nature's chorus begins

Whispering secrets to the trees
Transcending boundaries, breaking free
As songbirds sing of unity

And as the sun climbs higher
Transfiguration complete
We join the chorus, hearts ablaze
Singing the melody of retreat.

Metamorphic Lament

Oh, metamorphosis, bittersweet lament,
Each transformation, a soul's ascent,
In the cocoon, sorrow may reside,
Yet from its depths, beauty will abide.

With every change, a part of us dies,
A cherished piece, set free in the skies,
In the lament, a mourning melody,
For what once was, and what's yet to be.

But grief gives rise to newfound strength,
In the chrysalis, whispers at length,
We embrace the pain, the metamorphic storm,
